The sawmill at English Woodlands Timber near Midhurst, West Sussex. See our centre section for a feature on the selection and milling of timber for framing and construction.

Welcome to the Summer edition of WoodLots

Magazine. Following the Timber in Structures workshop and exhibition at the Woodland Enterprise Centre this June we are running a feature on the use of locally produced timber in construction. We look at a number of businesses involved at different points in the local supply chain.

Norman Guiver, the Chairman of the Carpenters Fellowship, discusses how the correct selection and milling of timber for green oak construction can enhance its properties for the framer and maximise its value for the producer.

Also in this issue we have news items on the local timber Producers Group (page 4) and Gervais Sawyer writes about a new website that has been established to give careers guidance for the timber industry (page 7).

Our next issue will be timed to be distributed just before the 2008 Weald Wood Fair at Bentley Wildfowl & Motor Museum so if you have any relevant items or advertising please let us know.

Beginners Fungi Walk, SATURDAY 4th OCTOBER 2008
Woodland Enterprise Centre, Flimwell

10am – 1pm. With Bryan Bullen. Cost of course £20

Join us for a walk in the woods, and learn to identify the principal fungi groups present at this time of year as well as the individual species names of the more common mushrooms and toadstools. Although not intended as a foray for collecting edibles, advice will be given on what is safe and what is poisonous, as well as the place of fungi in the ecology of woodland.

To register your interest in this course, to discuss the other courses we offer or to share comments and ideas about training provision please contact:

Tracy Pepler on 01580 879552 (leave a message) or via email: training@woodnet.org.uk

Local Timber Producers Group

As a result of the WoodNet Liaison group meeting earlier this year, WoodNet have developed a plan to create a local timber Producer Group. This group will initially have its focus in the East of East Sussex.

WoodNet will assist the group in obtaining grants and support the application procedure. Activities on adding value to timber will include: Woodfuel, charcoal, fencing, stakes, timber construction, hurdle making. Further activities will be developed by the group.

Our next meeting will be held on the 26th September at WEC Flimwell.

This day is free of charge and open to any contractors, landowners, or buyers who are interested in developing the group, attending training courses or supporting local produce.

Please register in advance – contact David Saunders on 01580 879552 or info@woodnet.org.uk

Coppice Survey

Debbie Bartlett from the University of Greenwich is conducting a second coppice survey. The last coppice survey was carried out between 2000 and 2003. The project is part of an ongoing program to raise awareness of the importance of coppice management. The last survey was influential in attracting funding to support the industry and in increasing woodland management.

The new survey seeks to find out where coppice has been cut between 1st September 2007 and 31st August 2008 and aims to discover how much coppice is cut and where it is happening in order to target future research. For a survey form please contact Debbie Bartlett via email:

WoodNet Products Directory Online Now

Go to www.woodnet.org.uk/Directory/ to use our new searchable directory of timber suppliers, manufacturers using local wood and business within the South-East offering services to woodland owners and the public.

Whereas WoodLots focuses on business to business support for the local timber supply chain we are keen for the directory to promote finished products and services to the general public. The directory is intended to help consumers meet producers and we invite WoodLots subscribers to submit listings for the directory that are more targeted towards the domestic consumer.

Adverts can be sent via email to: woodlots@woodnet.org.uk

THE DOORWAY...to careers in the timber industry. Gervais Sawyer writes:

A few years ago, Geoff Rhodes, then president of the Timber Trade Federation, convened a meeting of interested parties to tackle the sad state of education and training for the wood industries in the UK. The meeting drew in representatives from the wood distributing chain, professional educators, many trade organisations and manufacturing associations, the Forest Education Initiative and many more. After some preliminary investigation it was realised that the situation was indeed dire. The industry was not even attracting new young people to train. Although the wood industries are the sixth largest commercial activity in Britain, it is not a career that schoolchildren are even aware of. It was decided to begin by developing a one-stop information website called:

www.thedoorway.org.uk.

The website shows every conceivable career opportunity connected with wood: from planting trees to sawmilling, importing, logistics, sales, marketing, PR, IT, wood engineering, carpentry etc. right through to wood recycling. The website profiles the jobs with comments from real people about their working day. It also shows what your qualification path would be which is useful for those thinking of a change of career, since they can see what skills they can transfer. Other parts of the website give links to job vacancies, links to education resources and many others. It grows all the time. This is your industries website. If you want to add links to the site or advertise jobs, then please contact us.

In order to reach out to young people, a small and dedicated team go out to careers fairs, agricultural shows and wood fairs to meet the great British public and their families and to sow the seeds of a career in wood. Assistance at these events is always welcome.

Special Trees and Woods Conference

Oliver Rackham, renowned woodland historian and ecologist, is the guest speaker for the Special Trees and Woods Project's third annual conference. Professor Rackham is an engaging speaker with a great ability to read our surroundings. He agrees that every tree, hedge and wood holds clues that can unlock the past and will offer some advice on landscape detection techniques. Professor Rackham is well known for his book 'The History of the Countryside'.

Volunteers will also share their experiences of researching special trees and woods since the start of the project in January 2006.

The last two annual conferences have proved very popular and both have been fully booked. Make sure you book early to confirm your place on 22nd November in Hemel Hempstead. For more information go to www.chilternsaonb.org/special or call 01844 355 525.

Heritage Open Days-Chilterns

The Special Trees and Woods Project has uprooted many fascinating stories behind the Chiltern trees and woods, many of which are found on the interactive map at www.chilternsaonb.org

However, this September there is a chance to actually see some of the trees, and hear their stories, in a series of events celebrating Heritage Open Days. Organised as part of a national annual event co-ordinated by the Civic Trust, and funded by the Heritage Lottery Fund, all these events are free and many offer access into areas that are usually closed to the public.

There are five events from 11-14th September, all within 10 miles of High Wycombe. To find out more log on to the website or call 01844 355 525.

TIMBER IN STRUCTURES In this issue we feature three local companies that all work in a similar way to produce structural timber or buildings using locally sourced wood. Whilst being independent companies they all recognise the importance of a good supply infrastructure and the need for a degree of cooperation between companies within the region in order to support the wider market and to be able to fulfil orders.

ENGLISH WOODLANDS TIMBER

Tom Compton from English Woodlands Timber has recently launched a Local Timber information website and a Local Timber Demonstration Unit as part of his brief as SEEDA Timber Champion. Tom's aim for these projects has been to stimulate demand for local timber from contract specifiers such as architects and developers by improving access to information about the uses and grading of structural and cladding timbers. In some senses the market for local timber is no longer a volume market but there is still a strong potential demand for local timber for use in specialist design projects.

Difficulties in the supply chain can be overcome through better provision of information to end users, encouraging efficient sourcing and milling of timber to well specified orders. The aim being to create a more economically viable infrastructure for locally produced timber.

LOCAL TIMBER DEMONSTRATION UNIT

This new building has been specially constructed to showcase a wide variety of locally produced timbers and their potential for both interior and exterior uses.

It is based at the English Woodlands sawmill at Cocking nr Midhurst and is open for viewing by the public during office hours. (8am-4.30pm Mon-Fri) 01730 816941

LOCAL TIMBER WEBSITE:

www.localtimber.co.uk

This new website has been developed as part of the SEEDA Timber Champion project. It is clearly structured to provide information on a wide range of local timbers and their architectural uses, structural grades and characteristics as a resource for both the public, architects and developers.

BALCOMBE ESTATE MILL

This company started out as a smallscale sawmill producing sawn posts for the estate. Since then it has expanded; its core business is now producing green oak beams. Timber is sourced locally where possible and again they have found that the most flexible approach is to saw to order rather than hold sawn timber in stock. Although handling time is increased by working on a number of cutting lists at once they are able to reduce wastage and make the most efficient use of the available saw logs. Further income is generated by wood-chip production from the slabwood. This is supplied on contract to a local housing development at Hoathly Hill.

For further information: 01444 811446 or visit www.balcombeestate.co.uk.

Norman Guiver, Chairman of the Carpenters Fellowship writes about the best way to select and mill timber for green oak construction and how producers can add value by working with the natural features of the tree.

For various reasons including the strength of the Euro the source of cheap oak from the continent is fast drying up. However our German and French counterparts are still way ahead of us in the way they maximise their crop by adding value and we need to adopt some of their practises to do the same.

Identify your customer first There is a growing market in this country for English oak for timber framers who need specific cuts from the tree, such as curves for braces and flare for jowl posts. These companies will buy in advance if the quality is right, logs can be milled on site and beams delivered straight to the customer, reducing transport costs.

Fully dimensioned curved braces air dried for a year can command £20+ per cubic foot. Jowl posts which used the flair in the "jowl" or "gunstock" even more.

Timber for joinery needs to be milled accurately i.e. it needs to be straight and square. Square being 90 degrees not something about 90 degrees. Timber that is not square makes joinery longer to complete and labour is expensive.

Logs need to have sat for a minimum of 6 months before milling to reduce the amount of reaction. With the bark on these logs will still be green and green oak is far easier to work than dry oak. Longer lengths of 4 metres plus of good straight beams command a higher price.

If you are sitting with standing oak that needs harvesting go onto the Carpenters Fellowship web site www.carpentersfellowship.co.uk, go into the section "tradesmen" and locate a timber framer in your area. For a small fee (or a cup of tea) he or she will come out to look at the trees and advise as to how a timber framer would want them milled.

TIMBERSTRUCTURES (01273 488025)

John Russell is a green Oak carpenter with a yard on land near Chailey in West Sussex. He is currently working on a green Oak frame for a new build project being constructed at Waldron, although past projects have also included restoration and conservation work.

Again a key factor in his work is the careful selection of timber for structural elements such as braces. John has also found that potentially valuable features such as curved branches suitable for braces are all too often ignored and sold as cordwood.

One thing that emerges from all these examples is the way in which the functioning of the supply chain could be improved and value added to timber produce. A step towards this is the greater exchange of information between end users and designers such as timber framers or architects and those felling and milling local trees.

Woodlots aims to improve the economic viability of managing woodlands sustainably in the South East region by promoting the sale of local timber and wood products from the region.

A well managed woodland environment has the potential to produce a vast range of renewable products, whilst maintaining the uniquely wooded landscape of the region, generating income within the local rural economy, ensuring woodlands are safe for people to enjoy, and maintaining and often improving biodiversity. When you buy local wood products you support your local woodland environment.

WoodLots is a Weald WoodNet initiative supported by East Sussex County Council, West Sussex County Council, Hampshire County Council, SEEDA, the Forestry Framework SE & the Forestry Commission.
