Log Arch: Drying Alder for charcoal making at Ingram's Copse in West Sussex.
 See page 11 for further details about Didling Good Charcoal and Ingram's Copse.

Welcome to the Summer/Autumn issue of WoodLots.

Inside on page 9 we have an update from Jane Hull from the Forestry Commission about current funding schemes for forestry-related business activities.

On page 10, and following on from our wood fuel article in the last issue, we have an article from Simon Hickmott of East Sussex County Council. This focuses on the council's wider strategy for reducing carbon emissions and the place that wood fuel can play in that strategy.

The feature on page 11 is a profile of a charcoal making business at Ingram's Copse in West Sussex that is a great example of a well-planned and sustainable woodland enterprise.

We have decided that this Issue 74 will be our last printed edition of Woodlots as a magazine. The timber for sale and wood wanted adverts have been produced as a simple, effective and low-cost way of improving communications between wood growers and timber users for over 15 years and we are proud of how Woodlots has developed over that time.

Fund-raising through grants and advertising for the printing and distribution of the magazine has become increasingly difficult, and with the continued support of SEEDA, the Forestry Commission and some local councils we have greatly improved our website and directory. It now offers a much better resource for promoting and advertising local timber on the web to a much wider audience, and is much more up to date.

We will continue to develop the website and hope to offer a number of further services, such as enhanced display advertising, in the near future. Further details of the new structure can be found overleaf on page 4.

We wish to thank all the individuals and businesses who have supported and contributed to the magazine over the years and hope you will continue to support us during this restructuring.

Helping timber growers and wood users to make the most of timber resources in South East England

The Future of WoodLots: www.woodnet.org.uk

WoodNet was established in 1995 in order to improve the flow of local timber in the supply chain, linking growers of wood with users of timber. Over the years, Woodnet has established a large database of woodland owners, forestry contractors and timber-using business in the South East, and has used this to help to forge many working partnerships to improve the trade in locally-grown wood.

Woodlots has played a key part in this initiative – the quarterly magazine, and more recently the Internet site, has hosted many adverts which has assisted increased business-to-business networking and trade.

This venture was supported from the outset by a range of local authorities who helped co-fund this low-cost rural development initiative, but in recent years this funding has gradually dried up, so we have now reached the point that decisions have to be made how best to continue to deliver the service.

One factor that we have been conscious of is the growing interest amongst the buying public about the sourcing of food and other materials from local producers. Increasingly this has included wood products, and email enquiries often come from further afield than just the SE region.

Woodnet has been able to assist you to meet this demand through the creation of a searchable directory on the Woodnet website, which makes it easier for a customer to find a relevant advert or specialist supplier, thereby assisting forestry businesses by introducing new customers.

We feel that we have reached the point where the internet-based adverting has become so much more up to date than the printed version, that Woodnet will now concentrate remaining resources on developing the website as the main point of contact. For this reason no further paper publications of Woodlots are planned after this issue.

However, for those who prefer to keep track of what is going on without spending hours on-line, we will provide easily printable pages of the most up-to-date adverts, and articles, for you to read at your leisure.

For a small fee Woodnet will continue to profile small businesses who want to develop a web presence within Woodnet-hosted web pages, helping you to take advantage of our well established search ranking for your products and services.

We do need to keep in contact, please take the time to re-register your adverts with us by sending us an email with your details (please see contact details on the following page).

This Project received funding from SEEDA and the High Weald Sustainable Development Fund

Subscription

This is likely to be the last printed issue of WoodLots magazine however we still do not have email addresses for many of our subscribers.

In order for us to still be able to contact you, if you are a postal subscriber and still wish to receive updates about WoodLots via email please ensure we have an up-to-date email address for you.

You can contact us via: woodlots@woodnet.org.uk

Submitting Adverts

You can now easily submit new adverts to the website using the SEND ADVERT link on the main Woodlots page of our website: www.woodnet.org.uk

Alternatively you can send adverts in the body of an email to the email address above or by post to the WEC. (see postal address page 2)

FUNDING FOR FORESTRY BUSINESSES

Funding is now available for capital investment in your forestry business. This is particularly focused on investment in adding value to woodland produce or to improve the economic value of your woodland. This funding is available mainly through the Rural Development Programme for England (RDPE).

A good number of businesses around the region have now received funding through this route in the past year. Grants have been given to businesses who were investing in the following types of projects:

- Firewood processors to improve the efficiency and safety of firewood business
- Woodchipper for a woodfuel business to supply quality chip
- Mobile sawbenches to add value to timber at source
- A marketing project for wood products from a small local group of forestry contractors.
- Buildings for woodchip storage for a woodfuel supply business
- Infrastructure for the expansion of a business making sweet chestnut paling fencing.

There are currently 3 routes to getting funding. There are 14 Leader groups in specific geographic areas spread across the region. These deal with projects requesting grant funding up to £50,000. For those requesting funding above £50,000 the South East England Development Agency (SEEDA) will administer the applications. For those outside Leader groups looking for up to £20,000 there will be one final round of the South East Woodland and Timber Fund in October 2009, managed by the Forestry Commission.

This funding is competitive, so whilst most forestry businesses will be eligible for funding all applications will be submitted to a Regional Appraisal Panel and funding cannot be assumed.

For more details on eligibility for these schemes see www.forestry.gov.uk/segrants.

Or see contact details opposite:

Funding Opportunities for Forestry

Grants are available for you to invest in your forestry business by adding value to forestry products and improving the economic value of woodland:

- Rural Development Programme for England (RDPE)
- RDPE LEADER
- South East Woodland and Timber Fund
- Subsidised training available through Landskills South East

Eligible activities include capital investment in machinery and buildings, development of woodfuel supply chains, marketing and training. Grant rates are up to 40-50% of eligible costs.

Wood and the Climate Change Challenge

Climate change is one of the biggest issues that we face. Here, Simon Hickmott (Head of Environment and Waste Strategy at East Sussex County Council), sets out the scale of the local challenge and wonders what more we can do.

In East Sussex and other counties, local government and partners are determined to do more to address climate change. National Government has now set out the scale of this in targets agreed between its regional arm (Government Office for the South East) and county and city-based partnerships. In the case of the East Sussex Strategic Partnership (see <http://www.essp.org.uk>), we are seeking 25,000 tonnes of carbon dioxide emissions reduction from action in our local area in each of the three years 2008/9 to 2010/11, and are expecting national programmes to deliver four times this scale in our area. Have you done anything or do you plan to do anything that will contribute to this local target?

At 1,000 kw in total, East Sussex County Council's Crowborough Beacon school boilers save around 600 tonnes of carbon dioxide per year; if we can get around 10% of motorists along the coastal road from Newhaven to Brighton to switch to using buses, as a result of our new bus lane, they'll save around 1,000 tonnes per year. For some programmes of work, we don't yet know whether the balance will be positive or negative – we'll need to develop greater fluency in the language of carbon emissions. The Government requires all new houses to be carbon neutral by 2016 and recently sought views on what they should mean in detail. With our need to reduce overall emissions by around 3% per year to reach the 80% cut from 1990 to 2050, could we build in a carbon negative way in our wooded part of England?

"Bio-char" has caught the headlines in the national and international environmental press – though turning wood into charcoal seems like old news in these parts. It's an interesting idea that we might be able to reduce carbon dioxide levels in the air by burying it as charcoal (see <http://www.geos.ed.ac.uk/scs/biochar>). Abroad, char has been found that appears to have been stable in soils for many hundreds of years. Massive, world-wide biochar use might have the same unintended pitfalls as biofuel production, but could a local approach have a role here? Application rates of 50 tonnes per hectare have been suggested as one-off gains, so even a 100 hectare experiment would be significant.

The wood sector has a key role to play in the south east of England to help us all to reduce our emissions, through the substitution of wood for fossil fuels and timber in construction for more carbon-rich materials such as concrete and steel. In our area we have both inspirational and more easily replicated examples of both in buildings at Flimwell, Singleton and in Hastings, and in heating at Lewes Prison, Crowborough schools and the Hoathly Hill Community.

These examples and others are well known amongst professionals, and several have been featured in 'open days' and weeks, but could we do more to show them off to others, leading potential converts through the hurdles? Who would be best placed to do this; is there a role for WoodFair and other events that draw those who are already quite interested; and should we focus efforts at a particular time of year, such as during Energy Saving Week (19-25 October in 2009)? East Sussex County Council used to produce a "Wood Season" programme of events running from WoodFair to mid-November; perhaps it's time to return to this with 'extra added climate change'?

I'd welcome your thoughts on future initiatives and reports on local achievements.

Didling Charcoal at Ingram's Copse

Nestled in the shady lanes north of the Downs of West Sussex is Ingram's Copse, a hive of woodland activity and timber enterprise.

Chris and Lucy Wall-Palmer bought this woodland in 1995 and has developed his coppice and firewood business on the 8 acre site, which now includes charcoal-making, and specialist sawmilling for locally-sourced sustainable building components.

The factory floor is like no other I have seen – a mixture of functional endeavour and artistic inspiration, even the split lengths of alder seasoning around the kiln are stacked in a sinuous corral. The single species alder charcoal sold as "Didling Good" is exceptional quality for Barbecues and Chris is now exploring markets for the fines he produces.

After undertaking his value-adding activities under permitted development, Chris has followed earlier planning precedents in West Sussex, and has recently achieved consent for a house in the woods for him and his family, linked to their requirement to live on site to manage the charcoal-making process.

Building is now under way, and Chris has used sweet chestnut poles for the roundwood cruck frame, and Douglas fir for the joists and rafters. Built in collaboration with Ben Law, this woodman's house is bigger than the Prickly Nut Wood predecessor, with two floors, and although not yet finished, the aesthetic is crisp, and almost engineered. The pristine roof is made from accurately-sawn cedar shingles which Chris and his team produced by the thousand on his adapted Lumbermate mobile sawmill.

All the timber used has come from the locality, some from Ingram's Copse, with the larger sections supplied by Cowdray Estate, whose forestry team scoured their woods for the perfect sized poles.

Chris and Lucy are practising a truly sustainable lifestyle, and are an example of the sort of rural "key workers" who keep the Wealden landscape functioning. With the advent of the new South Downs National Park, perhaps the value of business such as "Didling Good" will be properly recognised and supported.
